GREAT STRUGGLE WON BY LOGAN

Final Game for School Basketball Championship Captured by Close Score.

Standing of Teams.

Won, Lost, P. C.

The Brigham Young college basketball team of Logan, for the first time in its history, annexed the state school basketball championship by defeating the Brigham Young university of Provo at the state university gym by an official score of 27 to 24. Perhaps better games from the basketball students' point of view have been played in this state, but never were players actuated by more intense rivalry. Nor did this intense desire to win limit itself to the players.

rivalry. Nor did this intense desire to win limit itself to the players.
Fully 1,000 rooters, about evenly divided, came from Logan and Provo and this crowd was augmented by another nearly as large composed of disinterested fans from Salt Lake and the surrounding towns. It was the crowd of Provo and Logan, in which a college spirit carried to the limit showed the intense feeling between the two schools founded years between the two schools founded years ago by Brigham Young.

Provo Won the Moral Fight.

The Logan institution won the game of basketball, but the Provo school won in the moral fight which was behind the scene being enacted on the gymnasium floor. At one time when Provo was well in the lead and victory seemed certain, the leader of the Provo rooters walked over to the crowd of B. Y. C. students and laughingly hurled taunts at the discomfited and down-hearted rooters of the comfited and down-hearted rooters of the B. Y. C. His words were met with yells, all of which were proper. Then the Provo man gave the Provo donkey yell imitating a donkey both in sound and appearance. So elever was the act that the disinterested persons could not help laughing. Here the leader of the Logan rooters, who from appearance might be the heavy slugger of the college, stepped up and with a menacing look ordered the Provo man to the other side of the hall. For a moment it looked as if trouble would sure-moment it looked as if trouble would sure-ly come about and on either side of the hall rival rooters appeared ready to mix. The Provo man, howeveer, equal to the occasion, smillngly allowed himself to be occasion, smilingly allowed himself to be led away and after reaching the side of the hall reserved for Provo, drew an imaginary line across the floor and wildly waved his arms at the Loganite, who was posed as Ajax defying the lightning. It took with the crowd and the action of the Provoltes at this juncture threw a good feeling into the entire crowd which remained until the last.

Logan Won Game Twice.

The Logan players won the game of basketball twice before it was finally given to them. At the end of time for the second half a dispute arose over the score and the official scorer finally called the game a tic by a score of 24 to 24. Extra time was called to finish the game and a long hitch resulted over who should he the proper referee and umpire. It was finally decided to allow Coach Pinkley of the Illinois university basketball team to finish the game as referee. George Tay-lor was agreed upon as umpire. In a few seconds after play was resumed a basket from a free throw gave Logan one point and a couple of seconds afterward a good throw from Wangsgaard scored two more points, giving Logan the game for the second time.

B. Y. U. Makes Better Start.

When time was first called the Provo team rapidly forged to the front and Logan was apparently outclassed. The northern players did not score a single field goal in the first half, which re-sulted in a score of 15 to 6 against them. In the second half they came back strong er and picked up in their work until abou off its feet. In the second half Provo scored a single field goal against four scored by Logan, not including the winning throw made after play had been resumed.

Provo played by far the rougher game of the two, but played with far more confidence. While the team work of Logan showed a higher degree of perfection, the desire of the individual players to star instead of playing a "one for all game" cost them many points. Provo was not so active on the floor, but the men willingly sacrificed their chances to give some closer man a try for a basket. Logan's passing and handling of the ball was better and its work in the back field far superior, but too many long shots for baskets were tried when closer attention to under basket team work would have scored more points. scored more points.

STATE CHAMPIONSHIP MUDDLE.

Since the result was made known of yesterday's game between the B. Y. C. and the B. Y. U., The Herald has been repeatedly called upon to decide the question of which team held the state championship in basketball. This question cannot be settled, and three teams have a partial claim on the title. The B. Y. C. won the state school championship yesterday and has a clear title to that honor. When it comes to the state championship, however, the Salt Lake Y. M. C. A. stands up as a strong factor. This team has twice defeated the B. Y. C., which won the state school title, but, on the other hand, has been twice defeated by the B. Y. U., which lost out to the B. Y. C. The Logan team cannot, therefore, claim the title, because the Y. M. C. A. stands ahead of it. The B. Y. U. defeats stand in the way of the Y. M. C. A. The argument can be justly brought forward that the Y. M. C. A. was not in condition when it played the B. Y. U., but this school ly brought forward that the Y. M. C. A. was not in condition when it played the B. Y. U., but this school can say it was not in shape when it lost out to the B. Y. C. The games with the Crescent five, which also gives a line on the Y. M. C. A. and the B. Y. U., are in favor of the Salt Lake team, as this team won and the Provo team was defeated. As the teams now stand it would be, therefore, proper to give the B. Y. C. the state school shampionship and the Y. M. C. A. the state athletic club championship. It would be a great thing for the sport if these two teams could get together and play a series of, say, three games, and the winner would then have a clear claim to the title of state champions.
